U. S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE
AGRICULTURAL MARKETING SERVICE

WASHINGTON, D. C.

DECEMBER 1940

AGRICULTURAL MARKETING SERVICE

The Agricultural Marketing Service is responsible for the collection and dissemination of crop and livestock production reports and other agricultural statistics and the gathering and reporting of current market information from terminal markets, shipping points and producing sections.

Commonly known as the crop and livestock reporting service, timely statistical information is provided through field offices on the progress of growing crops and on successive phases in the production, storage and movement of farm products. Reports are issued at seasonal periods on the acreage, yield, production, disposition, prices and value of more than 100 crops. The service also includes reports on numbers, production, sales, disposition, and value of livestock on farms, numbers of livestock on feed on specified dates; on production, utilization, sales and value of dairy and poultry products; and on storage stocks of all major agricultural commodities. The reports are based on returns received regularly from thousands of volunteer crop and livestock reporters, warehousemen, millers, canners, and others.

Through the nationwide market news service, day-to-day reports are issued to producers, processors, market agencies, distributors and consumers on the movement, supplies, demand and prices of all major farm products. The information is obtained at terminal markets, shipping points and in producing sections, and is widely disseminated by press and radio. Market news offices for livestock and meats are maintained at 31 points over the country, most of which are connected by leased wires so that the market information collected at any one point may be quickly disseminated to other markets.

SUPPLEMENTARY REPORTS
Issued by
Bureau of Agricultural Economics

The Livestock Situation. Contains an analysis of the chief factors affecting the outlook for prices and supplies of cattle, hogs, sheep and lambs. The outlook for each species of livestock is given in detail in months when it is timely, or when new information becomes available. Special articles concerning various economic problems of livestock producers appear from time to time. Each report also gives a brief review of recent developments in the livestock situation, as well as a short summary of the wool situation.

Released about the 18th of each month.

The Wool Situation. Contains an analysis of factors affecting the outlook for supplies, consumption, and prices of wool in the United States. Since the United States usually imports considerable quantities of wool, a review and analysis of developments in the wool situation in foreign countries also is included in this report. Statistics on production, stocks and consumption of wool for the United States and for important foreign countries also are given. Special articles relating to economic problems of the wool industry appear from time to time.

Released about the 10th of each month.

The Feed Situation. Contains an analysis of factors affecting the outlook for supplies and prices of the principal feeds, including corn, oats, barley, grain sorghums, millfeeds and the various high-protein feeds. Changes in the relation of feed supplies and prices to the livestock industry are analyzed from time to time. Statistics of production, stocks, and disappearance of the important feeds produced in the United States also are given.

Released about the 25th of each month.

ANNUAL AND PERIODIC REPORTS
